Figuring Modesty in Feminist Discourse Across the Americas, 1633–1700

Tamara Harvey, George Mason University

Women and Gender in the Early Modern World

“Using the early modern definition of modesty as ‘keeping due measure,’ Tamara Harvey investigates, in creative and novel ways, the involvement of four early American women in the religious, philosophical and medical debates of their day…Harvey’s innovative approach proffers scholars with a new method to interrogate corporeality within the literary and religious works of early modern women.”

—Janet Moore Lindman, Rowan University

Inventive in its approach and provocative in its analysis, this study offers fresh readings of the arguments and practices of four seventeenth-century Euro-American women—Anne Bradstreet, Anne Hutchinson, Sor Juana Inés de la Cruz and Marie de l’Incarnation. Tamara Harvey compares functionalist treatments of the body by these women, offering a new way to think of corporeality as a device in literary and religious expressions of modesty by women. In doing so, Harvey explores the engagement of these women in ongoing religious, political, scientific and social debates that would have been understood by the authors’ contemporaries in both Europe and America.
